Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its costents), is the laborious product pean scholarship. It has developædia making: its various revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those cospetent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, as better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full as important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek, upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much promarket, and could not be expected to give as much promarket, and could not be expected to give as much promarket, and could not be expected to give as much promarket, and could not be expected to give as much promarket, and could not be expected to give as much promarket.

Encyclopsedia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expense to American topics as sire. To supply these and of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete. Encyclopsedia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a libratedge. It brings a liberal Revolution education easily within the reach even of every and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the cuttit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every outlit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is anecessity.

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopedia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the said to sell the said though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased, by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to situader than to tell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than

The Young Profix has been from the first vuccessful beyond anticipation.—N. Y. Evening Fost.

It has a distinct purpose to which it steadily adheres—that, namely, of supplanting the vicious papers for the young with a paper more attractive as well as more wholesems.—Hoston Journal.

For neatness, elegance of engraving, and contents generally, it is unsurpassed by any publication of the kind yet brought to our notice.—Pittaburg Gazette.

Its weekly visits are engerly looked for, not only by the children, but also by parents who are surfous to provide pureliterature for their girls and boys.—Christian Advocate, Buffalo, N. Y.

A weekly paper for children which parents need not fear to let their children read at the fireside.—Hartford Daily Times.

is complete in all its details andwell worth an examination by any lady whe reeds anything in this line.

Desling only in reliable Goods, he does not think it necessary to quote prices of a few "cheap John" articles in order to induce customers to rome to his store, nor does he profess to sell his goods cheaper than any-body else, but he does make this declaration that no one shall sell any article he keeps in stock at a lower price than himself if he knows it.

All he asks in a personal examination of his stock and prices, feeling assured than no more valuable stock and no lower prices with be found any where in town.
